Excerpt: .sin; and in proportion as we submit our whole hearts and minds, alike in life and in thought, in study and in action, in theology, in philosophy, and in science, to the influence of that Spirit who is the source of all unity, will He harmonize our conflicting impulses and our various views of truth, till we all come unto the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. Such a faith, such a grasp of the whole course of the Christian Church, and such a vision of the future, ought to be the special prerogative of Englishmen. It was exemplified at the crisis of the Reformation, when such questions were even more distressing than they are now, by the great theologian to...
